VICTIM IN RAIL RIDING CASE IS PAID

Mrs. Minnie Richardson Gets Check for $1,700 from Daughters of Mrs. Raymond

RESUME OF FAMOUS CASE

Attorney E. V. Orvis on Monday received in the mails, two checks which spoiled the finale of the famous Volo rail-riding incident which, June 13, 1913, stirred Lake county and in fact the nation when a group of women took Mrs. John Richardson and rode her on a rail because they did not believe her actions toward Bill Dunnill were entirely in keeping with the staid town-life.

The checks are in settlement of the judgment which Mrs. Richardson secured against the women rail-riders and came from the two daughters of Mrs. Layna Raymond, on whose shoulder the entire burden of cost came because the other women were found not financially responsible.

The total amount covered by the two checks was $1,742.50. Each check was made out for $871.25, one signed by Mrs. V. L. Lusk one by Mrs. Charles Kappie, daughters of Mrs. Raymond. Mrs. Lusk was Mrs. Raymond's administrative under the will filed in county court.

Mrs. Richardson is still in Chicago and it is said that she has been ill for some time and unable to make her living.

The climax followed rather in this order:

- 1—Mrs. Dunnill and Dunnill for divorce.
- 2—Mrs. Richardson went to Chicago to live with her sister and never again lived with her husband.
- 3—Richardson was boycotted in his business at Volo and sold out at a sacrifice, later moving to Grayslake where he ran a store for a time.

Mrs. Richardson brought suit for $100,000 damages against the Volo women whom she claimed rode her on a rail and impaired her health. A jury verdict awarded her damages of $3,600. This verdict was held excessive and was cut to $1,500 by the judge. Mrs. Raymond was one of two who made defendant. Before the case was entered Mrs. Raymond was charged the court then back the judgment in the case as claimed that Mrs. Raymond was a member of the band of women who was financially able to pay the judgment.

The estate of Mrs. Raymond took an appeal to the Appellate court, asking that the act of the circuit judge in entering judgment be set aside. In the meantime attorneys for Mrs. Richardson went into County court and filed a claim against the Raymond estate. The judge of the County court declined to allow the claim until the Appellate court had ruled. Later the Appellate court entered a ruling in which the judgement of the Circuit Court was affirmed. It was announced immediately that attorneys for the Raymond estate would take an appeal to the Supreme court. Pending this ruling the claim in the County Court was allowed. The Appellate court was recently sustained by the Supreme court and accordingly the judgement was formally entered in county court and the heirs at law of Mrs. Raymond decided to act for the full amount, and the checks were sent.

Elmer Taylor Arrives from France

Elmer Taylor, who has been with the navy tank corps in France, has received an honorable discharge, and returned to the home of his mother at this place Wednesday afternoon. He was accompanied by Merinus Nelson of Kenosha, who has also received his discharge and who is now visiting at the Taylor home.

Marlon Coming On.

Lying on a farm, the children hear their fathers talk of the different crops. Our little neighbor was over to visit my 1-year-old daughter, who has never had much hair. Returning home, she said to her mother: "Marlon is certainly a fine crop of hair."

Family Verbs.

Speaking of odd verbs, it has been the custom for years in a certain Boston family to say when the weather has "cleared," "It has cleared up." The other day, one of them was even heard to say: "It has cleared up nicely."—Boston Transcript.

Stranger Dies From Heart Disease

A couple of weeks ago two men, very plainly foreigners, came to Antioch and rented rooms of William Keulman in the building in the rear of his jewelry store. The two men were strangers to each other, but happened to be sent here together by the beat sugar company to work in the beat fields.

One of the men, Joe Huber by name, was sick at the time of his arrival and was unable to work. Mr. Keulman, learning that he was ill, called a physician to attend him and done all he could in seeing that he was provided with necessities.

An effort was made to find out something of his family, but further than that he had a daughter in Milwaukee and a wife in the old country, nothing was learned. Mr. Keulman visited him Thursday afternoon and upon returning asked Mrs. Keulman to prepare something for Huber to eat. This she did and in less than a half hour took him the food. To her surprise she noticed his peculiar position as soon as she entered the room. Going immediately to him she found that he was dead.

Supervisor Webb was notified and he communicated with the daughter, but as she was not at all interested in the matter, the remains were taken to Libertyville and buried at the expense of the county.

Petitions Are Out To Raise Money For Oil

Petitions are being circulated among the business people and residents of this village, to raise a fund for the purchasing of a ten thousand gallon tank of oil to be used on the principal and most traveled streets.

This work is in charge of the Antioch Commercial association and all funds collected for the purpose will be handled by the Association.

The committee in charge have obtained prices on the oil and have found that the 10,000 gallons can be purchased for $625.00 f. o. b. Antioch, and estimate of $75.00 was placed on the work of spreading, thus bringing the total cost to $700.00. Should the subscriptions exceed this amount the surplus will remain in the treasury of the association to be used for filling holes and keeping the streets in good condition.

Gurnee Farmer Dies From Kick by Horse

John Dziel, well known resident of Gurnee, who was fatally injured Wednesday when he was kicked in the stomach by a horse, rallied long enough at the McAllister hospital to make his will, following which he had a relapse and died Friday morning. He was one of Gurnee's well-to-do farmers. He recently sold his farm which is located about two miles west and two miles north of Gurnee, to Ed Cunningham, and was to give possession this fall.

Antioch Loses Game With Silverlake

Last Sunday afternoon Antioch met Silverlake in a hotly contested ball game on the Silverlake grounds. In the second inning Silverlake got in two runs, and Antioch came up even with them by making two scores in the sixth. Silverlake then made one in the seventh and two in the eighth. Antioch had men on bases in both seventh and eighth innings but could not make a score. A large crowd was out and rooted strongly for the home team. Antioch will play on their home grounds in the near future.

Notice to the Public

The remainder of the fund collected from the business men last fall for graveling the streets has been used for filling holes in streets. The work was done by John Dupre.

Is It a Real One?

Here is quite an easy way to tell whether a diamond is a genuine one or not. Make a small dot on a piece of paper with a lead pencil and look at it through the diamond. If it shows only a single dot it is a genuine stone, but if it shows more than one dot you've been "had."

CHICAGOANS IN CRASH AT FOX LAKE

Auto Accident Monday Night in Which Chicago Labor Agent is Victim

GOING 60 MILES AN HOUR

That seven persons were not killed outright when a seven passenger touring car turned turtle three or four times in making a turn at Fox Lake Monday evening about 8:30 o'clock when the auto was traveling at least sixty miles an hour is one of the miracles of the season.

When a young man was seen driving the car at a terrific rate toward the Colonial hotel, witnesses predicted that something would happen, and it did.

As the car reached the turn where the road leads to the Colonial and other Inns the suspected happened, the car turned turtle not once but two or three times and the several occupants were hurled right and left and most of them lay prone on the ground when the crowd gathered.

The victims included the following: Mr. and Mrs. Frank White of Chicago, both of whom were very badly hurt internally.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shield of Chicago, both badly hurt. Shield's injury consisting of a broken shoulder, his wife's injuries being internal and also to her limbs. Shield is a prominent labor agent in Chicago.

Another occupant was said to have been Miss Kupheimer who had been staying at Long Lake. Another young lady's name was not obtained. The car was being driven by a young fellow named Arthur, his last name not being given.

The victims were carried to the Williams Inn where Dr. Schaffer of Grayslake attended them. It was conceded that all were seriously hurt and for a time it was feared that Mrs. Shield would not survive. However late reports were that she was improving and it is likely that no fatality will result from the accident. The car was completely demolished.

Grayslake Girl Jumps Into Lake Michigan

Despondent because of a blasted love affair, pretty Nellie Dailey, an 18 year old Grayslake girl, leaped off the south pier into Lake Michigan at Waukegan, Thursday night about six o'clock in an effort to commit suicide. A sailor from Great Lakes to whom the young woman had confided her intention, leaped into the water after her and succeeded in rescuing her although she fought to break away from him.

Inquiries are being made at the naval station to locate a sailor named Edward Harper, said to be connected with the detail office. Following her unsuccessful attempt to take her life the girl begged that the authorities communicate with Harper and ask him to call and see her. The authorities think that Harper may be able to throw light on the affair for Miss Dailey positively declines to relate any details of the incident.

According to the statement made to the police by her father this is not the first time that the young woman has attempted to end her own life. It was only a few months ago, it is said, when she swallowed poison, but the prompt service of a physician saved her life.

It seems that the young woman left her home at Grayslake over a week ago, leaving the impression that she was going to Milwaukee. When she did not return the family became worried and even now a brother is in Milwaukee seeking to find some trace of the young woman.

Herbert Strang Dies Very Suddenly

Lake County friends of Herbert Strang, a son of former postmaster Thomas Strang, of Libertyville and late of Wadsworth will be surprised to hear that he dropped dead suddenly at his home in Highland Park Thursday evening. Heart trouble is believed to have been the cause.

Mr. Strang was 40 years old and had been employed as conductor on the electric line for the past twenty years. He was one of the oldest men in service on the road.

He was feeling as good as usual on Thursday, chatted with friends in the street before going home for the night and his shockingly sudden death was hard to understand. He had worked all day and it was nine o'clock when he reached his home. He picked up the paper and made the remark to his wife that he had a strange pain in his system. Shortly afterwards he was obliged to go to bed, and at eleven o'clock he had succumbed.

Besides his wife he leaves four children. The wife and children returned from Florida only five weeks ago. Mrs. Strang formerly was Miss Ives.

There have been four deaths in the Strang family since last October. At that time Wesley Strang of Gurnee, died from wounds received in action in France. Mrs. Ed Bartlett of Wadsworth died the latter part of December. Henry Strang of Waukegan died May 12. Mrs. Bartlett was a sister of Henry Strang and an aunt of Wesley and Herbert Strang.

The body of Wesley Strang will be brought home from France for burial, relatives having requested the government to do so. They had the choice of leaving his body in France or placing it in the national cemetery in Washington or returning it to Gurnee.

Mrs. L. Sowles Receives Souvenir Gun from France

Mrs. Lela Sowles in receipt of a German gun, sent to her as a souvenir by Bernice Fields, who is still overseas. Fields took the gun from a dead German and preserved it as a souvenir.

In order to send it to America he sawed the stock in two, and was thus enabled to do it up in three separate packages. Each package was securely wrapped and mailed at separate times. One arrived last Saturday, another Monday forenoon and the third Monday afternoon. Clyde Fields who spent some time in France made short work of assembling the parts and it is now on exhibition at Mrs. Sowles' restaurant, where it is receiving unlimited attention.

A glance shows that it is of an old pattern, and a rusty metal plate bearing the inscription "Loewe Berlin, 1890" gives rise to the opinion that it was manufactured in that year.

Sale of Besley Brewery to Park Board

According to the records, the Waukegan park district this week took title to the old Besley Brewery company property, consideration $16,750, the sale being made through Master in Chancery Baabain.

The taking over of this property puts an end to the plans to have an artificial ice plant installed there as was the hope when Messrs. Beaubien, Edwards and Finkelstein some time ago purchased it from the Chicago interests.

The park district needed the property it is stated, to carry out its plans for a park on the ravine and of course the old brewery buildings will be torn down to make way for the improvements that makes up the park idea.

Ancient Jewels

That women of ancient times were not less fond of jewelry than these of today might reasonably be taken for granted. But the remarkable fact (as recently ascertained by archaeologists) is that the jewelry they wore at a period, let us say, 1,000 years before the birth of Christ—was fully equal in artistic workmanship to the best products of the twentieth century.

Seem'd Indelicate

Magie always liked to talk over the telephone; one morning before she was dressed, nunny called up and after talking to nunny asked to speak to Magie, but she positively refused to come to the phone, and when nunny asked her why she would not talk to nunny over the phone she said, "I's ashamed to talk when I isn't dressed."

There has been a marked increase in population since the last issue of the Bumstead director in 1916.

F. Scott McBride is now afraid of the weapon in his own hands. The search and seizure law. In the last issue of his paper he comes out in defense of the act in saying that this section of the law does not mean that any private house can be entered. Whether it is a fact or not, the times does not profess to know, but McBride certainly should give a better explanation.—Grayslake Times.

Salt Used as Money

The value of salt is recognized in all countries, and in those parts of the world where it is scarce it is used as money. In some parts of Abyssinia bars of salt and rifle cartridges are the only small change in circulation. The bars are ten inches long and two inches in length and breadth. Five or eight "salts" make one dollar, depending on the distance of the source of supply. Three cartridges have the value of one salt.

Constable is to Levy Where Personal Tax is Unpaid

Lake county residents who have not yet paid their personal property tax would better watch their step for they are not going to escape this year as they have in other years. The county treasurer is going to collect every cent of personal tax or know the reason why.

Announcement was made at the office of the county treasurer Tuesday that final notices are being issued by the treasurer to all delinquent personal property taxpayers. This tax the county treasurer says must be paid by June 1.

After that the matter is to be turned over to a constable who will proceed to make a levy on property wherever the tax is not paid. Constable fees will be added to the tax.

In past years the collection of taxes has been made by the town collectors and many of those who wished to escape paying their personal taxes have been able to escape. This year the entire collection has been placed in the hands of the county treasurer and he asserts that he is going to make a complete clean-up and wipe his books clean of all delinquents.

Illegal Voting in Area, Charged

A. H. Smith of Area charges that he would be president of that village were it not for the fact that fraud entered into the election held there April 15, of this year. Smith, through Attorney George W. Field, Wednesday filed a petition in circuit court, contesting the election and asking that he be declared elected instead of Thomas Russell who was declared to have defeated him by a margin of two votes.

Smith charges that at the election seventy voters wrote his name in on the ballot and he charges that this all was done according to proper form but he made the additional charges:

- 1—That the judges who counted the ballots credited him with but 65 votes.
  - 2—That Russell was declared to have had 67 votes.
  - 3—That votes were cast for Russell by people who were not bona fide electors of Area and that certain mutilated ballots were counted for Russell when they should have been declared void.
  - 4—That he would have won by a margin of at least ten votes over Russell had not the total vote cast for the latter been cut through error and fraud.
- Smith asks that a recount be granted by the court and that the 143 ballots cast be passed upon by the court and the result given out according to the finding.

No Trace of Treasures

It is regrettable that we know so little about King Hiram—from whose seaport of Tyre, 100 miles north of Jerusalem, most of the material was shipped for building the famous temple. Probably like Solomon, he had great stores of jewels, but none of them has been preserved, and, as for Carthage (called Tarshish in the Bible) it was destroyed so utterly by the Romans that no identifiable relics of the kind have survived.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Secret of Happiness

The happiness of life is made up of minute fractions—the little charities, a kiss, a smile, a kind look, or word, a heartfelt compliment in the disguise of a joke, and the countless other essentials to peace of mind which are few, simple and always close at hand. If we would cultivate the habit of making a note of these things, we would get more pleasure out of the common experiences of everyday life and should soon master the secret of happiness.

THE THIRTEENTH COMMANDMENT.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Daphne scuttled for the subway as a fugitive rabbit to its burrow. But she was not a rabbit and she felt suffocated in the tunnel. She could not endure to be quiet in the presence of so many goggle eyes like aligned buttons. She left the train at the next station and walked rapidly to Fifth avenue, and up it homeward.

She walked rapidly for the comfort of the restlessness, but there was no comfortable destination ahead of her. She found Mrs. Chevis at home with her disconsolate husband. Daphne dared not tell them just yet that she had lost her place. She would tell them when she got another one. For fear that they might ask why she was home so early, she went down to Bayard's apartment.

She wanted to tell Bayard and Lella what had happened. It was safe, she felt sure. Bayard would never attack Gerst. He would be more likely to rail at Daphne for bringing the trouble on herself.

Lella let her in at the door, but she was in a militant humor. She said, "Hello!" grimly and stepped back for Daphne to enter. Daphne found Bayard still aglow with interrupted quarrel. He said, "Hello!" with a dismal connotation.

"What do you suppose that brother of yours orders me to do now?" said Lella, whirling Daphne toward her.

"I can't imagine," said Daphne, incredulous of Bayard's ordering Lella to do anything.

"He wants me to go to Dutilh and put up a poor mouth and humiliate myself."

Bayard snatched Daphne to him and stormed: "She bought the clothes, didn't she, without consulting me? She wouldn't send 'em back as you did yours; she wore 'em out, paraded 'em before other men there in Newport while I was slaving here. And now that Dutilh insists on money that I haven't got, and can't get, she won't even go explain it to him. That's all I ask her—to explain it to him and ask him to be patient so that I won't be sued. I can't stand that. I've had every other calamity but I've never been sued for debt. I ask Lella to go tell him about my hard luck and my fine prospects—play fair with him—and with me. But will she do it? No! She won't do anything for me."

Daphne was swayed by his emotion. She pleaded: "Why don't you, Lella? You have such winning ways. I'll go with you."

Lella hesitated, then answered by taking up her hat and slapping it on her head. She paused, took it off again, and went to her room, unhooking her gown as she went; she knew that in asking favors one should wear one's best apparels.

Bayard grumbled, "How are you getting along at your office?"

Daphne felt unable to intrude her own troubles on his. She shrugged her shoulders. It is a kind of white lie, she shrug.

"Hang on to your job as long as you can, old girl, for you'll have to support us all, I guess. You're the only one of us that can get a job or earn a cent. That's the advantage of being a pretty girl."

Daphne was almost moved to tell him some of the disadvantages of being a pretty girl, but she felt that the time was unfit for exploiting her own woes. She ached for some one to disclose them to, but she withheld them.

Lella came in, arrayed in her very finest. She was smiling in the contentment of beauty at its best. "When you ask credit you've got to look as if you didn't need it," she said.

They found Dutilh in a state of unusual excitement and exhaustion. There were few customers in his place and he left them to the other salespeople. He advanced on Lella and Daphne and gave a hand to each.

"Why, oh why in the name of Paul Potrei didn't you come in a week ago? The prates have taken every decent gown I had. The sewing women are working like mad to reproduce 'em, but there's nothing left fit to show, except to Pittsburgh and Pittsburg tourists. Where did you get that awful rag you have on?"

"Here," said Lella.

"Oh, of course, I remember. It's beautiful. Sit down. I'm dead. Have a cigarette? Have a cup of tea? Oh, Miss Galvey—tea for three, please. I didn't forget either of you when I was in Paris. I have a siren gown for you, Mrs. Kip, that will break your heart with joy. You'd murder to get it. And as for you, Miss Kip—well, you'll simply be indecently demure in the one I call 'Innocence.'"

Daphne was a trifle shocked, but Lella's eyes filled with tears at the mockery of such talk. She moaned: "I didn't come to buy. I came to apologize and beg for mercy. I owe you a lot of money, and I haven't a cent."

"Who has? What of it? Nobody's paying anybody."

"But I had an urgent letter from your bookkeeper, or somebody."

"Don't mind her. She gets excited. Nobody pays me. You come in and get another gown and you'll catch a millionaire with it."

It was hard for Dutilh to keep his clients clear in his memory.

"And I can't afford to have my children going round in last year's rags. You do as you're told and come around next week. I'll get my money out of you some day. Trust me for that."

Lella felt a rapturous desire to kiss him and call him names of gratitude. He was generous by impulse and patient, and nobody's fool at that. The thoughts of tailors are long, long thoughts.

Daphne sat thinking, but not of clothes. The labor problem had almost demoralized her. She was studying the models as they lounged about the shop. Suddenly she spoke. "Oh, Mr. Dutilh, how much money does a model earn?"

"You mean what salary do I pay? Common clothes-horses get fifteen or sixteen dollars. Better-looking get better pay. You're worth a thousand a week at least. Want a job?"

"Yes."

His smile was quenched. He studied her across his cup. He saw the anxiety in her curiosity.

"What's the matter?" he said. "Has he run off with another girl, or do you expect to go fishing for a millionaire in my pond?"

"I need the money. I've had hard luck," Daphne said it so solemnly that he grew solemn, too.

"That's too bad! Well, I've got more girls now than I need. Nobody as beautiful as you, of course, but—I suppose I could let some one go."

"Oh, I couldn't think of that!"

"Neither could I. Well, I'll squeeze you in somewhere. But I can't pay you as much as you are worth. Would—um—twenty dollars a week interest you?"

"It would fascinate me."

"All right, you're engaged. You can begin next Monday." He turned to Lella. "Do you want a job, too?"

"No, thank you!" Lella snapped. Her eyes were blacker than ever with rage, and her red-white cheeks curdled with shame. She could not trust herself to speak. Her brunette beauty had the threat of a storm-laden thundercloud.

When she and Daphne had taken their departure, Lella still dared not speak to Daphne on the way home. She dared not speak to her at all.

Lella brought triumph to Bayard. She told him what Dutilh had told her of his willingness to wait for his money.

Bayard embraced Lella and hailed her as an angel. When she had taken full toll of her success, she told Bayard what Daphne had done. She told it simply, without emphasis, knowing its effect.

"Daphne!" he roared. "You asked Dutilh for a position among his models? Great Lord of heaven, I'll telegraph father to come take you home!"

"That's all right," Daphne taunted. "You'll send the message collect, and he'll never be able to pay for it, so he'll never know what he missed."

"But surely we are not such beggars that—"

"Who has any money? Who has anything left to pawn?"

"But there must be other jobs."

"Get me one."

"There must be some other way."

And what Daphne had done. She told it simply, without emphasis, knowing its effect.

"Daphne!" he roared. "You asked Dutilh for a position among his models? Great Lord of heaven, I'll telegraph father to come take you home!"

"That's all right," Daphne taunted. "You'll send the message collect, and he'll never be able to pay for it, so he'll never know what he missed."

"But surely we are not such beggars that—"

"Who has any money? Who has anything left to pawn?"

"But there must be other jobs."

"Get me one."

"There must be some other way."

"Show me." Clay Winburn came in after dinner. His protests against Daphne's project were louder than Bayard's, with the added reason of jealousy. But he had no substitute to offer.

She forebore to tell him of the Gerst affair. He was deep enough in the mire. He went away a little later and she returned to her cubbyhole with the Chivvies.

Those were black days for all America, suffering under the backfire from the sudden war and from the long fatigue of hard times. There were weeks of dread lest the United States be sucked into the maelstrom at a time when it was least prepared in money, arms, or spirit. Never, perhaps, in human chronicle had so many people looked with such bewildered misery on so many people locked in such multifarious carnage.

At such a time, as in an epoch of plague, there came a desperate need of a respite from war; soldiers, sky-larked in trenches; war widows danced in gay colors; festivals were held in the name of charity; frivolities and vices were resorted to that good souls might renew themselves for the awful work before them.

It was in such a mood of imperative demand for cheer of some sort that Tom Duane swam back into Daphne's gloomy sky.

Daphne had come home after a morning of rebuffs. She was heart-sore and foot-sore, in shabby boots that she could not replace. She was called to the telephone, and Duane's voice chanted in her ear with a tone of peculiarly comforting melancholy.

"That you, Miss Kip? This is me, Mr. Duane. Poor Tom Duane. Poor Tom's a cold. I came back to town unexpectedly early. I have something important to say to you. Will you take a little ride with me in my car?"

"Why not?" she said, with a laugh. She was glad that he could not see the tears that gushed across her eyelids.

"Three cheers for you! I'll be there in a jiffy. You couldn't arrange to dine with me, could you? Or could you?"

Again she answered, "Why not?" Duane's voice rang back: "Tip-top! You've made me happy as a box of pups. I'm half-way there already."

CHAPTER XIX.

When Duane came up to the door he greeted her with the beaming joyousness of a rising sun. He praised her and thanked her for lending him her time. The elevator that took their bodies down took her spirits up. She noted that he had not brought his big car with his chauffeur. He stewed her into a powerful roaster built for two. But she had no inclination to protest. The car caught them away and they sped through Central park with lyrical, with dithyrambic, sweep.

"The trees—how wonderful they are!" she cried.

They had been wonderful for weeks, but she had thought them dismal.

"They're nothing to what they are in Westchester," said Duane. "We're going to have a look at them and dine up there somewhere."

"Are we?" was all she said.

And he said, "We are."

After they left the park and re-entered the hard streets she found the courage to remind him: "But you said you had something important to tell me. What was it?"

"Miss Kip, you've played the very devil with me. I thought I was immune to the lover gerin, but—well, I told you the truth about going abroad to shake off the fever—the fever—the Daphnitis that attacked me. But I couldn't get you out of my mind for long, or out of my heart at all. I'm a sick man, Miss Kip, a lovesick man."

"Mr. Duane, you mustn't—I can't allow you—really!"

"Oh, yes, you can!" he said, and sent the car ahead with a plunge. "You're going to listen to me for once. You can't help yourself. I'm not going to hurt you. I just want you to help me a little. I went up in the Berkshires and tried to get my sanity back, but I couldn't! I couldn't even play golf—or cards—or drink. People drive me crazy. I can't get interested in anything or anybody but you."

"Mr. Duane, please—You oughtn't to—I beg you. I have no right—"

"Oh, I know you're engaged to Clay Winburn. He's a nice kid. I'm not one-two-three with him. I'm not trying to cut him out—I couldn't if I would. I like him. I'd like to help him, and your brother, too. I don't mean to be impertinent, either; but—well, the main thing is, I want to beg you to let me see you once in a while."

"I want to take you out riding and dining and dancing—and you can take Winburn along if you've got to, but I want you to save my life somehow. And, by the Lord Harry! I think I'll save yours. You don't look well, my dear—Miss Kip. It breaks my heart to see it. No, I don't believe you're getting as much fun out of life as you ought to. There isn't much fun in the world any more, but what little I get is very precious, and I want you to get all that's going. Won't you let me help you go after it? Won't you?"

They swung up to a height that commanded a vast reach of the Hudson. Between its banks it seemed to be a river of wine. The western sky was like a forest of autumn leaves with the last red and pink beautiful, since it must turn so soon to rust.

In a spirit of haste the fleetly spinning wheels murmured, "Why not, why not, why not, why-not-why-not-why-not?"

Before the sunset had quite relinquished the sky the moon was rising and the horizon—the harvest moon, huge and close and of a meditative mien. It paled and dwindled as it climbed, but its power seemed to grow.

It left Daphne more alone with

Duane, a little afraid of him and of the gloaming. They emerged above the chain of Croton lakes and ran across the big dam and wound along the shore, crossing iron bridge after iron bridge, till they came to a little roadside inn whose lights had a yellow warmth.

"We're stopping here for dinner, if you don't mind," said Duane.

Daphne was a trifle ill at ease, but she was hungry, too, and the adventure was exhilarating. There were not many people at the tables, and they were of an adventurous cast as well.

When Duane had given his order he asked Daphne if she would join the rest of the diners who had left their chairs to fox-trot. She shook her head and he did not urge her.

But by the time their dinner was served and eaten the nagging, interminable music had played away nearly all her scruples.

When Duane looked at her with an appealing smile, she smiled back, nodded and rose. He leaped to his feet and took her in his arms.

Somehow, it was not mere dancing now. He had told her that he loved her. There was in his embrace an eagerness that was full of deference, but full of delight as well. After all, she was alone with him in a company that seemed not to be very respectable, and was growing less so every hour.

Her feet and all her limbs and every muscle of her revealed in the gambol, ing but expense of money and heart's ache and torture.

Suddenly but quietly upon this current of her thoughts a thought of Duane's was launched like a skiff congenial to the tide. He spoke almost as softly as a thought, at first with a quaint shock such as a boat makes, launched.

"How often do you go to church?" he said, whimsically.

"Why—never, I'm afraid," she gasped in surprise.

"You were planning to be married in church?"

"Such funny questions! Yes, of course."

"Why?"

"Oh, it wouldn't be nice not to."

"You don't believe in divorce, then?"

"Oh yes—yes, indeed—if people don't get along together. I think it's wicked for people to live together if they don't love each other."

"It's love, then, that makes marriage sacred?"

"Yes, yes, indeed. Of course!"

"Is it all right for two people who are not Christians to live together according to their creeds?"

"How do you mean?"

"Well, the people who lived before there were any Christians—or people who never heard of Christianity—was it all right for them to marry?"

"Of course."

"It's not any one formula, then, that makes marriage all right?"

"Of course not, it's the—the—"

"The love?"

"I think so. It's hard to explain."

"Everything is, isn't it?"

"Terribly."

There was more silence. He took a cigar from his pocket, held it before her for permission. She said, "Please." He struck a match. She glanced at his face in the little light of the match. It was very handsome. A pearl of drowsy lustre gleamed in the soft folds of his tie. The hands sheltering the match were splendid hands.

She watched the cigar fire glow and fade and the little turbulent smoke vells float into the air and die. One of them formed a wreath, a strange, frail, writhing circlet of blue filaments. It drifted past her and she put her finger into it—her ring-finger by some womanly instinct.

"Now you're married to me," said Duane.

There was a sudden movement of his hands as if to seize upon her. She recoiled a little; his hands did not pursue her. They went back to the steering wheel and clung to it fiercely. She turned from his eyes, but he gazed at her cheek, and she could feel the blood stirring there in a blush.

"If you loved me, would you marry me?" he said.

"I—I love—I'm going to marry—somebody else."

"When?"

"Some day."

"If you're not happy with him, will you leave him?"

"Oh, but I'll be happy with him."

"So many people have said that! You've seen how seldom it worked. If you ceased to love him, or he you, would you leave him?"

"If it is a large order. Maybe."

"Wouldn't it be wiser if two people who thought they loved could live together for a while before they married?"

She felt her muscles set as if she would rise and run away from such words. "Mr. Duane! I don't think it's nice even to be talking of such things. Besides, it's growing late."

"It's not so late as it would be if you married a man and found that your marriage was a ghastly mistake."

"Haven't we better start back?"

"Please don't leave me just yet. This is very solemn to me. I've been studying you a long time, trying to get you out of my mind, and only getting you deeper in my heart. I love you."

"I don't believe it."

"I know it."

"Then you oughtn't to tell me."

"Not tell a woman you love her? Not try to save her from wrecking her life and my own?"

"How wrecking my—her life?"

"I believe that if you marry Clay Winburn you'll be unhappy. He can't give you a home. He can't buy you clothes. He can't support you."

"That's not his fault, just now—with the hard times and the war. Please let's go home."

"To my home?"

"That insolence was too appalling to answer, or even to gasp at, or protest against. It stunned her. He took advantage of her daze to explain, hurriedly:

"You're not going to be one of those silly, old-fashioned idiot girls that man can't talk to earnestly and frankly. Are you now? Of course you're not. You're not one of those poor things whose virtue consists in being insulted every time anyone appeals to their intelligence, are you? No, you're a fine, brave soul, and you want to know the truth about truth, and so do I."

"I'm a decent enough fellow at heart. I want to do the right thing and live squarely as well as the next fellow. I've got a sense of honor, too, of a sort, and I take life pretty seriously."

"I tell you, the world is all turned topsy-turvy the last few years. The old rules don't rule. They never did, but people pretended to believe in 'em. Now we're not so afraid of the truth in science or history or religion or anything. We want to know the truth and live by it."

The Way Out.

If a man or a machio is unable to accomplish a task it should be turned over to a woman and a hairpin.—London Answers.

He could imagine her pretty head, but her heart and mind and conscience were troubling her till she stopped short at last and said:

"I'm sorry, but I'd rather not dance any more—here."

Duane paused in a moment's chagrin. Then he sighed: "All right." They retreated to their table, and he looked at her sadly, and she sadly at him. Then he seemed to like her even better than before, and he said, with a very tender smile:

"Want to go home?"

"If you don't mind."

When they came out upon the veranda of the hotel the lake was a vast charger of frosted silver among the hills. They stood admiring it for a moment and the music from the hotel seemed to come from another world. He helped her into the car and they whisked away southerly.

He returned to the road along the Hudson, and it was so beautiful in the moonlight that it seemed a pity to hurry through the wonderland at such speed. And what was she going back to that she should be in such haste?

He hinted as much to Duane, and he bettered the suggestion. Not only did he check the speed, but at one wooded cliffside with a vista of peculiar majesty he wheeled out of the road and stopped the car, shut down the chattering engine and turned off the strenuous lights.

They sat utterly content till Duane shook off the blissful stupor. They could not stay here thus forever. They could not stay much longer. It was growing cold and late.

He did not dare to look at Daphne. He did not quite need to. He could imagine her pretty head and the drowsy, adorable eyes, the lips pursed with childish solemnity, the throat stem in the ure contour of her shoulders, the vaselle curves of her young torso. For they now were swaddled in a thick motorcoat. But without turning his head he could see her little hands clasped idly at her knees, the little gloves turned back at the wrist. He thought that he would like to take them in his arms, into his heart, into his keeping.

Yet he did not want to marry her. He did not admire marriage in its results as he saw them in other people. Like many another, he cherished wicked ideas because the everyday virtues worked out so imperfectly, so unattractively.

Daphne was musing almost vaguely. On the river in yacht at anchor poised like a swan asleep. She would like to own a yacht. On the opposite side of the river along the road she could see motorcars like inquisitive crickets with gleaming eyes and feelers of light. She would like to own a motor or two.

If she were the wife of as rich a man as this man at her side, how quickly she could help her father and Bayard and the wretched victims of the massacre in Europe and so many people—yes, and even Clay, poor dear, hopeless, helpless Clay Winburn, to whom she had brought nothing but expense of money and heart's ache and torture.

Suddenly but quietly upon this current of her thoughts a thought of Duane's was launched like a skiff congenial to the tide. He spoke almost as softly as a thought, at first with a quaint shock such as a boat makes, launched.

Make This Test For Acid-Stomach

There are millions of people who suffer almost daily from the horrors of an acid-stomach—indigestion; sour, gassy, stomach; distressing heartburn; sickening food-repelling; painful bloating and that miserable, putrid, lumpy feeling after eating. Many of these people have tried treatment after treatment; medicine after medicine; others have gone to doctors and stomach specialists and some to hospitals, but in spite of all their efforts they have obtained no lasting relief or a permanent cure. These symptoms simply mean acid-stomach. If allowed to run on, they are very likely to cause a host of serious trouble. Dyspepsia, flatulism, indigestion, heartburn, splitting headache, nervousness, sleeplessness, mental depression, indigestion, a feeling of listlessness and all-gone-ness—these are just a few of the disorders which can be traced to acid-stomach. As a matter of fact, acid-stomach is often the direct cause of those almost incurable conditions known as catarrh of the stomach, intestinal ulcer, and cancer of the stomach. The lives of those who suffer from these serious troubles are nothing short of daily agony. Surely, then, you must see how important it is to go at once to the seat of the trouble—acid-stomach. You know what acid-stomach does to the teeth—how it eats right through the hard enamel and causes them to decay. Think then of the havoc that must be caused by excess acid in the stomach.

Even if you are not suffering any immediate stomach pains, but are not feeling just as fit and fine as you should, you should by all means make this test: Go to your drug store at once and get a big box of EATONIC. It is in the form of pleasant-tasting tablets—you eat them like a bit of candy. EATONIC is prepared for just one purpose—correcting acid-stomach by driving out the excess acid. EATONIC literally absorbs the excess acid. It brings instant relief from the pains of indigestion, heartburn, belching, sour, gassy stomach, bloating, etc. It makes the stomach pure, sweet, cool and comfortable, puts it in a normal, healthy condition, so that your food is properly digested. You need every bit of strength you can possibly get out of the food you eat—and EATONIC helps you get it.

Don't put this test off if you value your future good health and happiness. You run no chance at all because EATONIC is absolutely guaranteed to give you relief or your drug-gist will refund your money. The cost is a mere trifle.

TRIBUTE TO SLAIN NURSE

Edith Cavell's Body Is Taken to Westminster Abbey in England for Memorial Service.

London, May 17.—England paid tribute here to Edith Cavell, the English nurse executed by the Germans at Brussels October 12, 1915, when her body, en route from Brussels to her native city of Norwich, was taken to Westminster abbey for an impressive memorial service.

It was a public funeral, in which it seemed every resident of the great metropolis endeavored to participate. The streets through which the cortege moved were congested with crowds, and every inch of standing room in the neighborhood of the abbey was occupied by a densely massed multitude which was eager to do reverent homage to "that brave woman," as the bishop of London described her, "who deserves a great deal from the British empire."

The congregation at the abbey included high officials of the government, representatives of foreign countries, and men prominent in many walks of life.

SYNOPSIS

While Bobby Walton is fighting in France for his country, Max Martin is at home making thousands of dollars in war profits, and doing his best to discredit Bobby Walton in Ethelind Carey's eyes. His aunt, Mrs. Carey, is also anxious to discredit Bobby, as she thinks that Ethelind and Max would make a very brilliant match.

To do this, Max and Mrs. Carey circulate the story that Bobby holds some alien enemy property, and that he is in France fighting, simply to cover up his connection with it.

In the meantime Mr. Carey dies, and Max is appointed Administrator, as it seems there is no will. His first act as Administrator is to start about collecting a five thousand dollar mortgage from Mrs. Walton, that is due on the fifteen thousand dollar farm Bobby has purchased from Mr. Carey, his idea being to foreclose, pay back what had already been paid, and then present the farm to Ethelind, as he feels sure that Ethelind cares only about the farm, and will marry the man that goes with it.

Just when everything seems to be going nicely for Max, Dr. Brighton returns from France, bringing Bobby with him. The doctor proves there was a will, and gives to Ethelind an amendment to the will, which Mr. Carey made just before he died, and which gives to Ethelind the right to do with the mortgage as she sees fit.

Max, of course, could be imprisoned for hiding the will, but Dr. Brighton agrees to hush the matter up for Mrs. Carey's sake, and then, like a true knight of romance he "withdrew to smoke a cigar." Leaving Ethelind and Bobby to—well, that's telling, but if you really can't rest till you find out what happens then, be at the opera house Monday evening, May 26. They'll show you

CONGRESS HEARS MESSAGE FROM CHIEF EXECUTIVE

Recommendations of Much Importance Made in Document Read to Legislators.

NEED FOR MEASURES TO CHECK ANARCHISM

Prevalent Unrest of Labor Pointed Out as Constituting Grave Danger—Recommendations of Woman Suffrage—Would Have Ban on Liquor Prohibition Comes into Force.

Washington, May 20.—Patrick J. Hattigan, regular reading clerk of the house, read the president's message to congress today, practically as follows:

"Gentlemen of the Congress: I deeply regret my inability to be present at the opening of the extraordinary session of the congress. It still seems to be my duty to take part in the councils of the peace conference and contribute what I can to the solution of the innumerable questions to whose settlement it has had to address itself; for they are questions which affect the peace of the whole world and from them, therefore, the United States cannot stand apart. I deemed it my duty to call the congress together at this time because it was not wise to postpone longer the provisions which must be made for the support of the government. Many of the appropriations which are absolutely necessary for the maintenance of the government and the fulfillment of its varied obligations for the fiscal year 1919-1920 have not yet been made; the end of the present fiscal year is at hand; and action upon these appropriations can no longer be prudently delayed. It is necessary, therefore, that I should immediately call your attention to this critical need. It is hardly necessary for me to urge that it may receive your prompt attention.

"I shall take the liberty of addressing you on my return on the subjects which have most engrossed our attention during these last anxious months.

Domestic Legislation.

"I hesitate to venture any opinion or press any recommendation with regard to domestic legislation while absent from the United States and out of daily touch with intimate sources of information and counsel. I am conscious that I need, after so long an absence from Washington, to seek the advice of those who have remained in constant contact with domestic problems and who have known them close at hand from day to day; and I trust that it will very soon be possible for me to do so. But there are several questions pressing for consideration to which I feel that I may, and indeed must, even now direct your attention, if only in general terms. In speaking of them I shall, I dare say, be doing little more than speak your own thoughts. I hope that I shall speak your own judgment also.

"The question which stands at the front of all others in every country amidst the present great awakening is the question of labor; and perhaps I can speak of it with as great advantage while engrossed in the consideration of interests which affect all countries alike as I could at home and amidst the interests which naturally most affect my thought, because they are the interests of our people.

Rights of the Worker.

"By the question of labor I do not mean the question of efficient industrial production, the question of how labor is to be obtained and made effective in the great process of sustaining populations and winning success amidst commercial and industrial rivalries. I mean that much greater and more vital question, how are the men and women who do the daily labor of the world to obtain progressive improvement in the conditions of their labor, to be made happier, and to be served better by the communities and the industries which their labor sustains and advances? How are they to be given their right advantage as citizens and human beings?

Justice to Capital and Labor.

"We cannot go any further in our present direction. We have already gone too far. We cannot live our right life as a nation or achieve our proper success as an industrial community if capital and labor are to be antagonistic instead of helms partners. If they are to continue to distrust one another and contrive how they can get the better of one another, or what perhaps amounts to the same thing, calculate by what form and degree of coercion they can manage to extort on the one hand work enough to make enterprise profitable, on the other justice and fair treatment enough to make life tolerable. That bad road has turned out a blind alley. It is no thoroughfare to real prosperity. We must find another, leading in another direction and to a very different destination. It must lead not merely to accommodation but also to a genuine co-operation and partnership based upon a real community of interest and participation in control.

"Labor legislation lies, of course, chiefly with the states; but the new spirit and method of organization which must be effected are not to be brought by legislation so much as by the common counsel and voluntary co-operation of capitalist, manager, and workman. Legislation can go only a very little way in recommending what shall be done. The organization of industry is a matter of corporate and individual initiative and of practical business arrangement. Those who really desire a new relationship between capital and labor can readily find a way to bring it about; and perhaps federal legislation can help more than state legislation could.

Industrial Democratization.

"The object of all reform in this essential matter must be the genuine democratization of industry, based upon a full recognition of the right of those who work, in whatever rank, to participate in some organic way in every decision which directly affects their welfare on the part they are to play in industry. Some positive legislation is practicable. The congress has already shown the way to one reform which should be world-wide, by establishing the eight-hour day as the standard day in every field of labor over which it can exercise control. It has sought to find the way to prevent child labor, and will, I hope and believe, presently find it. It has served the whole country by leading the way in developing the means of preserving and safeguarding life and health in dangerous industries. The members of the committee on labor in the two houses hardly need suggestions from me as to what means they shall seek to make the federal government the agent of the whole nation in planning out, and if need be, guiding the process of reorganization and reform.

Duty to Returning Soldiers.

"I am sure that it is not necessary for me to remind that there is one immediate and very practical question of labor that we should meet in the most liberal spirit. We must see to it that our returning soldiers are assisted in every practicable way to find the places for which they are fitted in the daily work of this country. This can be done by developing and maintaining upon an adequate scale the noble organization created by the department of labor for placing men seeking work; and it can also be done, in at least one very great field, by giving new opportunities for individual enterprise. The secretary of the interior has pointed out the way by which returning soldiers may be helped to find and take up land in the hitherto undeveloped regions of the country which the federal government has already prepared or can readily prepare for cultivation, and also on many of the outworn or neglected areas which lie within the limits of the older states; and I once more take the liberty of recommending very urgently that his plan shall receive the immediate and substantial support of the congress.

Future Commerce.

"Our new merchant ships, which have in some quarters been feared as destructive rivals, may prove helpful rivals, rather, and common servants very much needed and welcome. Our great shipyards, new and old, will be so opened to the use of the world that they will prove immensely serviceable to every maritime people in restoring, much more rapidly than would otherwise have been possible, the tonnage wantonly destroyed in the war. I have only to suggest that there are many points at which we can facilitate American enterprise in foreign trade by opportune legislation, and make it easy for American merchant ships where they will be welcomed as friends rather than as dreaded antagonists.

"And credit and enterprise alike will be quickened by timely and helpful legislation with regard to taxation. I hope that the congress will find it possible to undertake an early reconsideration of federal taxes, in order to make our system of taxation more simple and easy of administration and the taxes themselves as little burdensome as they can be made and yet suffice to support the government and meet all its obligations. The figures to which those obligations have arisen are very great indeed, but they are not so great as to make it difficult for the nation to meet them, and meet them, perhaps, in a single generation, by taxes which will neither crush nor discourage. They are not so great as they seem, not so great as the immense sums we have had to borrow, added to the immense sums we have had to raise by taxation, would seem to indicate; for a very large proportion of these sums were raised in order that they might be loaned to the governments with which we were associated in the war, and those loans will, of course, constitute assets not liabilities, and will not have to be taken care of by our taxpayers.

"The main thing we shall have to care for is that our taxation shall rest as lightly as possible on the productive resources of the country, that its rates shall be stable, and that it shall be constant in its revenue-yielding power.

"Many of the minor taxes provided for in the federal legislation of 1917 and 1918, though no doubt made necessary by the pressing necessities of the war time, can hardly find sufficient justification under the easier circumstances of peace, and can now happily be got rid of. Among these, I hope you will agree, are the excises upon various manufactures and the taxes upon retail sales. They are unequal in the incidence on different industries and on different individuals. Their collection is difficult and expensive. Those which are levied upon articles sold at retail are largely evaded by the readjustment of retail prices. On the other hand, I should assume that it is expedient to maintain a considerable range of indirect taxes; and the fact that alcoholic liquors will presently no longer afford a source of revenue by taxation makes it the more necessary that the field should be carefully restudied in order that equivalent sources of revenue may be found which will be legitimate and not burdensome to draw upon.

Import Duties Correct.

"There is, fortunately, no occasion for undertaking in the immediate future, any general revision of our system of import duties. No serious danger of foreign competition now threatens American industries. Our country has emerged from the war less disturbed and less weakened than any of the European countries which are our competitors in manufacture. So far from there being any danger or need of accentuated foreign competition, it is likely that the conditions of the next few years will greatly facilitate the marketing of American manufactures abroad. Least of all should we depart from the policy adopted in the tariff act of 1913, of permitting the free entry into the United States of the raw materials needed to supplement and enrich our own abundant supplies.

Asks Woman Suffrage.

"Will you not permit me, turning from these matters, to speak once more, and very earnestly, of the proposed amendment to the Constitution which would extend the suffrage to women and which passed the house of representatives at the last session of the congress? It seems to me that every consideration of justice and of public advantage calls for the immediate adoption of that amendment and its submission forthwith to the legislatures of the several states. Throughout all the world this long-delayed extension of the suffrage is looked for.

The Telegraph and Telephone Lines.

"The telegraph and telephone lines will, of course, be returned to their owners so soon as the retransfer can be effected without administrative confusion; so soon that is, as the change can be made with least possible inconvenience to the public and to the owners themselves. The railroads will be handed over to their owners at the end of the calendar year. If I were in immediate contact with the administrative questions which must govern the retransfer of the telegraph and telephone lines, I could name the exact date for their return also. Until I am in direct contact with the practical questions involved I can only suggest in the case of the telegraphs and telephones, as in the case of their railways, it is clearly desirable in the public interest that some legislation should be considered which may tend to make of these indispensable instrumentalities of our modern life a uniform and co-ordinated system which will afford those who use them a complete and certain means of communication.

"The demoralization of the military forces of the country has progressed to such a point that it seems to me entirely safe now to remove the ban upon the manufacture and sale of wine and beer, but I am advised that without further legislation I have not the legal authority to remove the present restrictions. I therefore recommend that the act approved November 21, 1918, entitled, 'An act to enable the secretary of agriculture to carry out during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, the purposes of the act entitled 'an act to provide further for the national security and defense by stimulating and facilitating the distribution of agricultural products,' and for other purposes,' be amended or repealed in so far as it applies to wine and beer.

"WOODROW WILSON."

"So get into the thick of the action. It is not possible to have too many friends in the fire if you are truly intelligent and know how to make the most of your time. Get something to do and then just peg away until you have made a success of it.

EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS ON

Republicans Are in Full Control—Seven Big Appropriation Bills to Be Passed.

GILLETT IS ELECTED SPEAKER

League of Nations, Railroads, Shipping, Woman Suffrage Taken Up—Berger Refused Recognition by the Speaker.

Washington, May 21.—The "reconstruction" congress, assembling in extraordinary session Monday, under the call by President Wilson from Paris May 7, marks the return to power of the Republicans and loss by the Democrats of control over the national legislature.

Representative Gillett of Massachusetts (Rep.) was elected speaker of the house over Champ Clark (Dem.).

By a majority of two votes, the Republicans took control of the senate, electing Senator Cummins president pro tempore and defeating Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, Democrat, by a record vote of 47 to 42.

The woman suffrage constitutional amendment got top place on the house calendar. By general agreement Representative Mann's joint resolution, similar to the measure passed last session by the house and defeated in the senate, was designated No. 1.

A resolution to repeal the luxury tax as of the war revenue, agreed upon by leaders of both parties at the last session was introduced by Representative Moore of Pennsylvania as a part of the Republican party's legislative program.

The business of swearing in new senators was disposed of quickly. In the house there were a greater number of new members and it took longer. All the Republican senators were present; four Democrats were absent.

The immediate work is passage before July 1 of seven regular annual appropriation bills which failed in the senate last March.

After that will come consideration of the peace treaty and of the league of nations, and railroad, shipping, revenue, woman suffrage, prohibition, army and navy and many other measures. Many investigations, particularly into war activities, are expected.

The Republicans, for the first time since 1911, had majorities in both branches of congress as a result of the congressional elections last November.

In the house they have a margin of 40 votes. In the senate their majority is only two.

Republican action is restrained by President Wilson's veto power. Co-operation between administration officials and the Republicans is expected on uncontested matters.

The avalanche of bills and resolutions incident to a new session began in the house, but introduction of senate measures went over.

Final action by the senate on the peace treaty and the covenant of the league of nations before July 1 is not generally expected, although much discussion meanwhile is planned. Besides the treaty itself the proposed agreement with Great Britain and France for protection of France from attack by Germany promises much discussion.

Prohibition enforcement legislation is expected to receive early attention. Repeal of the war prohibition measures as well as the constitutional amendment is to be urged.

Victor Berger of Wisconsin, whose right to a seat is contested because he is under conviction for violation of the espionage law, did not attempt to vote.

When the name of Berger was called as new members were sworn, Representative Dalling of Massachusetts, chairman of the elections committee, formally challenged his right to be seated.

Speaker Gillett directed Berger to stand aside when he appeared for the oath, and refused to recognize him when he tried to speak as a matter of personal privilege.

NC-3 ARRIVES IN AZORES

Flagship of U. S. Seaplanes Comes In to Ponta Delgada—Crew in Good Shape.

Horta, Azores, May 21.—All three of the American seaplanes are now accounted for. NC-3, the missing flagship of the squadron, came into the harbor of Ponta Delgada under her own power after having been 67 hours and 15 minutes at sea. Commander Towers and his crew were in good condition, but fagged out by lack of rest.

Nine Divisions to Return.

Washington, May 21.—The 5th, 6th, 9th and 7th regular divisions have been released for return to the United States. General Pershing notified the war department. The four divisions are to sail from France in June.

British Rout Reds.

Helsinki, Finland, May 21.—British ships engaged the bolshevik fleet in the Gulf of Finland after one of their ships had been sunk and another stranded.

Bobby was entertaining the air pilot who was waiting to see his sister.

MERELY PIECE OF FOOLING

Course Taken by Germany Resembles Closely Neat Trick That Is Credited to Sheridan.

"The Germans, by fooling us with German holshelms, hoped to escape the payment of war indemnities," said a congressman.

"It reminds me of a story about Sheridan, the spendorthrift playwright. Gunter, the confectioner, left his statement with Sheridan one morning, and a few hours later Hanson, the ironmonger, called.

"Innison was very pressing on the subject of his account. He harangued and he harangued. Sheridan, broke, as usual, paced the floor in despair.

"But suddenly an idea struck the spendorthrift and he said:

"You know Gunter?"

"One of the safest men in London," Hanson replied.

"Then you will be satisfied if I give you his bill for the amount?"

"Certainly."

"Sheridan thereupon handed the ironmonger Gunter's neatly folded account, snatched up his hat and rushed forth."

Suffered for Years Miserable From Kidney Trouble. Doan's Made Mr. Barnett Strong and Well.

"I suffered untold agony with my kidneys for years," says John Barnett, 30 Virginia Place, Buffalo, N. Y. "Sometimes I felt that I would burn up with fever, but every now and then would have a severe chill. Often my clothes were so wet with perspiration. The kidney secretions were so natural in color and odor and burned terribly. At night my shoes were so tight on my feet that I could hardly get them off, and my hands swelled so I couldn't hold a teaspoon. My back! Oh, how ached! I walked with a cane, and was all bent over like an aged man. When the terrible pains shot through my kidneys, my knees would give way and many times I had to be lifted to my feet by people on the street. I didn't care whether I lived or died. I was so miserable. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me of all kidney trouble. Doan's made me strong and well."

LOOKED LIKE LABOR WASTED

Board's Vilest Over, Small Boy Couldn't See Further Necessity for So Much Soap and Water.

He was a new little boy at the orphanage and was much impressed by all the scrubbing and cleaning he saw done there, more so because he had come from a home in which disorder and dirt had held sway. He could not understand it; more than that, it irritated him, and when he got the job of scrubbing the washroom, he was almost ready to leave.

But just then came a new excitement to the home. The board was coming to make its annual tour of inspection, and the cleaning was doubled. "Get ready for the board," was the home watchword, it seemed, and he, being very human, decided to stay until that big event was over.

The day of visiting came and passed. The next morning the new youngster sought the matron. "Now that the boards have been here, I don't see no use of scrubbing them steps so often—do you?" he asked.

MEMORIAL DAY — ITS ORIGIN

On May, 1902, the Washington Post published an article on the origin of Memorial day, which contained this paragraph:

"Should the United States desire to erect a monument to the man in whose brain originated the idea of a national Memorial day, the name-place on the granite to bear the simple word 'Considerable controversy has appeared in relation to the author of the suggestion, but it has found lodgment in the war department at Antioch, Ill., May 30, though widely known as a national holiday, is a virtue of state laws and generation and not because of act of Congress. Congress has practically no laws creating holidays for the country. It has designated all Sunday in May as Mother's Day, President Wilson, by proclamation May 30, 1910, requested that it be observed as Flag Day. But no holiday like July Fourth and May's day have not been enacted to exist."

There is no controversy over the fact that Memorial day was first observed in general orders to members of the Grand Army of the Republic in 1868 by Gen. John A. Logan, the commander in chief. This order is as follows, as preserved in the G. A. R. headquarters in Philadelphia:

General Orders No. 11.
The 30th day of May, 1868, is designated for the purpose of strewing flowers on the graves of our comrades who died in the war of the rebellion, and whose bodies now lie in every city, village and hamlet in the land. In absence of any form of ceremony, but posts and comrades in town may arrange such services and testimonials of respect as may be permitted.

Organized comrades, as our duty, for the purpose of preserving and honoring the memory of those who died in the war of the rebellion, and whose bodies now lie in every city, village and hamlet in the land. In absence of any form of ceremony, but posts and comrades in town may arrange such services and testimonials of respect as may be permitted.

In the first place there were decorations of Civil war graves previous to 1868 in various localities of the North and South. These were mostly informal. The earliest date back to the days of war itself and were merely local observances.

October 6, 1860, Col. Andrew H. H. Dawson, who had fought on the Confederate side, in the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, addressed 4,000 people and said in part:

"Let the North and the South meet as friends. Let them share common griefs, sacred sorrows. Let the daughters of the North and the daughters of the South meet with their floral offerings annually, on some great memorial day, on the fields where our heroes sleep full of their last sleep, and let their tears fall together upon the lowly pillows of their loved and lost. Let them kneel together there, and let their prayers for the welfare of our common country rise, as it were, on the wings of the same breath, and soar to heaven. Angels will be waiting at the portals of the skies to bear them to the men who gave themselves to their country should be kept up, and if so the arrangements for the time when living veterans of that war are no longer able to direct the memorial should be discussed and decided."

Worth Makes the Hero.
And so, my boy, I would have you honor the grizzly heroes. Their dress does not match well with modern fashions, but their motives cannot be easily improved upon. And after all the man is not made by his clothes. At this time the living heroes pay tribute to their fallen comrades. With bent forms and uncertain steps many of them follow the bugle call, but in their hearts and flashing from their eyes is the same fire that won the victories of the past. Soon some of them will fall and their comrades will have another mound to dedicate each 30th of May. And they who remain are just as truly heroes as those ever whom the eulogies are spoken and the flowers laid. It is not death but worth that makes a hero.—Grit.

to the present or to the coming generations that we have forgotten as a people the cost of a free and undivided republic.

"If other eyes grow dull, other hands sink, and other hearts cold in the solemn trust, ours shall keep it well as long as the light and warmth of life remain to us."

"Let us, then, at the time appointed gather around their sacred remains and garland the passionless mounds above them with the choicest flowers of springtime; let us in this solemn presence renew our pledges to aid and assist those whom they have left among us a sacred charge upon a nation's gratitude, the soldier's and sailor's widow and orphan."

"2. It is the purpose of the commander in chief to inaugurate this observance with the hope that it will be kept up from year to year, while a survivor of the war remains to honor the memory of his departed comrades. He earnestly desires the public press to lend its friendly aid in bringing to the notice of comrades in all parts of the country in time for simultaneous compliance therewith."

"3. Department commanders will use efforts to make this order effective."

"By order of
"JOHN A. LOGAN,
"Commander in Chief.
"N. P. CHIPMAN,
"Adjutant General."

General Logan's "general order" was followed by the observance of the first Memorial day in seventeen states. Maine in 1874 made Memorial day a legal holiday. Massachusetts did the same in 1881. Other states followed. Now Memorial day (May 30) is a legal holiday in most of the northern states. Alabama, Georgia, Florida and Mississippi observe April 26 and North and South Carolina May 10.

So the origin of the observance of Memorial day on May 30 is settled beyond question.

But where did the idea that lies back of the observance of Memorial day originate? Here indeed is room for controversy.

In the first place there were decorations of Civil war graves previous to 1868 in various localities of the North and South. These were mostly informal. The earliest date back to the days of war itself and were merely local observances.

October 6, 1860, Col. Andrew H. H. Dawson, who had fought on the Confederate side, in the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, addressed 4,000 people and said in part:

"Let the North and the South meet as friends. Let them share common griefs, sacred sorrows. Let the daughters of the North and the daughters of the South meet with their floral offerings annually, on some great memorial day, on the fields where our heroes sleep full of their last sleep, and let their tears fall together upon the lowly pillows of their loved and lost. Let them kneel together there, and let their prayers for the welfare of our common country rise, as it were, on the wings of the same breath, and soar to heaven. Angels will be waiting at the portals of the skies to bear them to the men who gave themselves to their country should be kept up, and if so the arrangements for the time when living veterans of that war are no longer able to direct the memorial should be discussed and decided."

Worth Makes the Hero.
And so, my boy, I would have you honor the grizzly heroes. Their dress does not match well with modern fashions, but their motives cannot be easily improved upon. And after all the man is not made by his clothes. At this time the living heroes pay tribute to their fallen comrades. With bent forms and uncertain steps many of them follow the bugle call, but in their hearts and flashing from their eyes is the same fire that won the victories of the past. And they who remain are just as truly heroes as those ever whom the eulogies are spoken and the flowers laid. It is not death but worth that makes a hero.—Grit.

GEN. JOHN A. LOGAN,
COMMANDER IN CHIEF G.A.R. IN 1868

to the footstool of the Great White Throne; and the God of our country will hear and answer them; fraternal feelings will revisit the riven land; man will recognize again in man his brother; sectional prejudices will pass away; sectionalism will receive the rebuke it deserves; and peace and prosperity, harmony and happiness will crown a national glory and grandeur without parallel in the annals of ages."

The following published statement is presumably true: "In the early spring of 1867 Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Kimball, of West Philadelphia, Pa., were visiting several points in the South. Mrs. Kimball, upon returning to Philadelphia, wrote to General Logan, an old friend, stating that in her visit to the South 'she had particularly noticed the graves of their dead, fallen in battle,' and suggesting to him that, 'as the commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic,' he should 'have our heroic soldiers whose lonely graves are, many unmarked, remembered in the same beautiful way.' General Logan quickly and heartily approved Mrs. Kimball's suggestion, informing her by letter that he felt that 'such a touching tribute to his dead comrades would undoubtedly meet with general favor.' General Logan frequently and explicitly, in public and in private, gave Mrs. Kimball credit for the suggestion in her letter."

In view of these statements it is a monument is created it would seem fitting that it should contain these names, instead of bearing the nameplate "Unknown":

ANDREW H. H. DAWSON.
MRS. HENRY S. KIMBALL.
JOHN A. LOGAN.

The day is not far distant when the calling of the Grand Army of the Republic roll will find no member to answer present. There are now 4,803 posts and 120,000 members. The 1918 death rate was more than 1,000 a month. But affiliated organizations will preserve the observance of Memorial day.

Then there is the Spanish-American war—and its heroic American dead and its national organization.

And now there is the Great War—and its heroic American dead and its coming organization of veterans.

It is in every respect fitting that Memorial day this year, and henceforth should also commemorate the heroic Americans who died in the Great War. For Memorial day there is an inspiring future.

Memorial day may even become an allied holiday.

GERMANS ASK FOR VOLUNTEERS

Leaders Insist Armed Resistance to Peace Terms Not Thought Of.

WANT TO PROTECT BORDER

Mobs in Berlin Protest Peace Terms —Huna' Reply Will Probably Be Delayed—New War Is Possible, Is Report.

Berlin, May 20.—Although government leaders insist armed resistance to the peace terms is out of the question, the army leaders are appealing to the Silesian population to join the volunteers.

The regiments composed of these men, it is planned, are to defend the country by concentrating on the border. The German leaders have dissolved the Polish supreme people's council.

Gigantic demonstrations took place in Berlin Sunday protesting against the peace terms. Chancellor Schelding and members of his cabinet addressed large crowds. The spirit of all the demonstrations was one of defiance, which was fanned to intense fury by the speakers, who warned the populace to stand united against the "foreign foe" and to avoid all domestic disorder. The day marked the end of the "blackout" and ashes' week decreed by President Ebert.

The preamble of Germany's main answer to the peace terms already is on route from Berlin to Versailles. It was learned at the headquarters of Count von Bernstorff, "home chief" of the German peace machinery.

It was added that it was doubtful whether the complete German answer would be delivered by Wednesday, the date stipulated by Clemenceau. Extension of at least a few days is expected in official circles.

Dispatches to German newspapers from Versailles say the original plan of contrasting the peace treaty, chapter by chapter, with the 14 points has been abandoned and instead a condensed expose of the alleged conflicts with those points will be filed.

German officers are opposed to the terms, as they would mean that 50,000 of them would be jobless.

What is going to happen? There are three answers:

1. The government will accept revised terms, enabling them to remain in office. This would not be for long, however, as hunger would increase the revolutionary spirit, causing the overthrow of the ministry.

2. The Volunteer army will fight with all force, inasmuch as defeat would end their career anyway.

3. The government might resign without making a decision. This would unite the three imperialistic parties.

Mystery Explained.

He stood amid the blaze and splendor of his magnificent mansion, and in his hand he held the portrait of a beautiful woman. His face was pale and haggard, and his lips moved convulsively.

What was this mystery. Was this the picture of his departed wife?

No.

Was it the portrait of his dead but dearly remembered daughter?

No.

What, then, was the cause of his haggard face?

Was it not the same portrait that two minutes ago had fallen from its wall, and raised a lump as big as a hen's egg on his head? It was.

Don't Worry.

Rise above small things. The woman who lets small things worry her will be completely undone the first time she meets with a really big problem. It is disintegrating to your mental and nervous condition, not to mention your physical condition, to worry. You need not be resigned to fate nor slip your troubles as the old friend ducks back, throws water. But you can meet troubles with a will to conquer them; adjust them—and after that "they should worry" but not you.—Exchange.

A Quick Freeze.

In freezing ice cream remember that time will be saved if you do the freezing in a warm place, as the more rapidly the ice melts the more quickly the ice cream or sherbet will be frozen.

First Impressions.

Mrs. McPherson—Can you lead me a bowl, Mr. McNelsh? I would just like our new lodger to take his parrot from the pet for the first day or two.—Exchange.

LOSS OF $200,000,000 TO PEOPLE OF COUNTRY CAUSED BY FOUR ALIEN PESTS

An Alien Rodent Executed in "Guillotine" Trap.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Four alien enemies have caused the people of this country two-thirds as much loss as more than 750 native rodents. The damage by the former is estimated at $200,000,000 annually, by the latter at $300,000,000 annually.

The chief alien enemies are the house mouse and three kinds of rats. The introduced European hare is also proving injurious in some localities. The natives are the more than 750 kinds of rodents that inhabit this continent north of Mexico.

Now, all of the 750 are, or may become, depredators, though many of them are only mildly and occasionally so, as is shown by the fact that together they accomplish only one and one-half times the damage caused by the four alien rodent pests. For the aliens are in practically every house, every barn, every mill, every elevator, every storehouse, over most of the country, while the natives run largely in the fields, ranges and woods.

Native Rodent Bad, Too.

Some of our native rodents are very bad citizens—such as the prairie dog, the pocket gopher, the ground squirrel. Even that ancient rival of the weather bureau, the groundhog, sometimes causes great damage, crunching corn like a litter of shotes or mowing down alfalfa or soy beans like a herd of steers. Against all these, unremitting warfare should be waged—unrelenting or at least such occasional warfare as is necessary to hold them in check.

But the case is quite different as to certain other animals usually regarded as destructive—the skunk, the weasel, the mink, the fox, and the badger. These are among the most potent natural agents, says the United States department of agriculture, in preventing an undue increase in mice, rats, ground squirrels, pocket gophers, and the like. Some of these have been hunted, of course, for their valuable pelts, but they are hunted also because they are considered the enemies of domestic animals and game. Cog-

GET RID OF RODENTS!

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The annual losses from rodent pests in the United States have been estimated at fully $300,000,000.

About two-fifths of this damage is inflicted by house rats and mice, both introduced from the old world, and the remainder by native species.

This enormous waste of resources may be greatly reduced through systematic and organized campaigns against the injurious species.

The bounty system effects no permanent relief and is far more costly than the use of poisons and traps.

The United States department of agriculture has developed and perfected practical methods of extermination which have been successfully applied over wide territory.

The bureau of biological survey of the department co-operates with the public in organizing and carrying out systematic campaigns against animal pests and invites correspondence on the subject.

Protection of these natural enemies is urged as an important aid in controlling rodent pests.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Sweetening the soil with lime is very important to the onion crop.

Fully deep plowing opens up the soil so rain can soak in more readily.

Proper drainage is the basis of any rational method of soil improvement.

A much neglected source of lime, potash, and phosphoric acid is wood ashes.

Weeds use up a lot of moisture and the weeds grow all the time; they must be kept out.

The more humus (decayed plant matter) there is in a soil, the deeper it will hold.
